

Brooke's Baby Nursery!

Shields' designer, Wendy Bellissimo, invites Us into newborn Grier's pretty new room

BY RACHEL PAULA ABRAHAMSON

Grier's Nursery Details

Oh, baby! For bundle of joy No. 2, Brooke Shields asked designer Wendy Bellissimo to make over a 10-by-12 nook in her Los Angeles home. "I decorated her daughter Rowan's nursery, and we stayed in touch," Bellissimo tells Us. One difference this time? "With Rowan, Brooke went gender-neutral. But with Grier she said, 'Get some pink in there!'"

Sweet and Simple Shields went gaga for the Vintage Teaberry Collection (babiesrus.com). "She loved that it's girly, but sophisticated," says Bellissimo, who finished the room in four weeks. "We thought we had five weeks," she says, "but the baby came early!"

"To see Brooke sit down and take a deep breath and know that the room was ready was such a gift," Bellissimo tells Us. "It was very special."

One touch that helped create the perfect room: a micro-velour Receiving Blanket (price unavailable, babiesrus.com) draped over a chair. "Everyone . . . says it's the only blanket their baby will go to sleep with," says Bellissimo. The night Shields finally saw the finished space, Bellissimo recalls her saying, "It's so incredibly beautiful. It feels so good!" Big sister Rowan, who's nearly 3, agreed: "She was going, 'Grier is going to love this!'"

Hoppily ever after! "Brooke wants 'Bunny' to be Grier's nickname," Bellissimo tells Us of the nursery's rabbit-themed artwork. (From $40, babiesrus.com)

Shields picked sweet but elegant furnishings, like this Honey Convertible crib set ($500, babiesrus.com) with a velvet skirt. "Brooke doesn't love things that are overly frilly," Bellissimo tells Us. "The nursery flows with the rest of the house, which is very comfortable."

The designer customized Grier's changing dresser (from $499, babiesrus.com) with flower ornaments — and stocked the cabinet with baby-level toys!

Bellissimo says that "being a mother is the most important thing in the world" to Shields (who gave birth to Grier on April 18).